

A/Prof Malcolm Johnston-Leek

MBBS MHM DipRANZCOG FACEM AFACHSM

Director

Northern Territory Medical Education & Training Centre (NT METC)

Dr Malcolm Johnston-Leek comes with a wealth of experience as a leader and an educator. As current Medical Director at St John Ambulance NT and prior to joining METC as the Senior Clinician, prehospital at the NCCTRC where he has established networks within both Health Services. He brings to this role his extensive experience as an Emergency Physician, in retrieval services and in disaster response and management, including following the Port Arthur shooting, the Queensland floods, Bali bombings, Solomon Islands in response to the dengue outbreak and Vanuatu after Cyclone Pam.

Malcolm has post graduate qualifications in emergency medicine, health management, aviation medicine and retrieval medicine. Currently he is in the Army reserve with the rank of Lt Col and has been deployed four times.

Malcolm is an Associate Professor at Edith Cowan University, a senior instructor for EMST, senior instructor for EMERGO Train and senior instructor for MIMMS and instructor for ALS.